God and Faith in the Shadow of the Holocaust

(Light refreshments will be available.)

Location: St. Augustine Preparatory School
611 Cedar Avenue, Richland, New Jersey

This workshop will focus on the explosive theme of where was God and religious institutions during the Holocaust. Since the end of the World War II, in 1945, Christian and Jewish theologians, writers, artists, and laypersons have grappled with the role of God and religion in the shadow of the Holocaust. Neither of the presenters is a rabbi or a priest or a pastor. Each is a lay person who has spent their intellectual and spiritual lives troubled by these questions. Both presenters believe that no student approaches the subject of Holocaust without thinking about such dilemmas.

Using power-point, film and other media, participants should expect a lively interchange of ideas and debate as we explore the very different ways persons have approached the subject of faith and God, as one writer put it, "after Auschwitz." This workshop is for students, teachers and members of the public ready to listen and to engage in this seminal subject.
